National Seminar

ON

“HUMAN RIGHTS UNDER THE CONSTITUTION OF INDIA”

Theme of the Seminar

The concept of human rights is not a present phenomenon. Human rights are commonly understood as inalienable Fundamental Rights to which a person is inherently entitled simply because she or he is a human being. Thus it is not created by any legislation. So the human rights permeate National and International system it is of recent origin and roughly goes back to four hundred years. Indian society being one of the oldest civilizations who has all along recognised certain basic rights of the individual. The development idea of human rights under the constitution means nature and contents of Fundamental Rights; Directive principles of state policy extend of human rights incorporated under the Constitution of India. The machines like NHRC and various SHRC play a vital role in India to safeguard the human rights of citizens from various maladies. The National Seminar has following sub –themes pervading various areas of human rights under the constitutional perspective

1. Development and growth of human rights under the constitution of India
2. Enforcement of human rights under regional mechanism
3. Issues and challenges of human rights under environmental perspective
4. Role of NHRC/SHRC
5. Implementation of common civil code

These sub-themes are only illustrative in nature so others relevant major themes also acceptable.
